

On the night before Halloween a family went to the Halloween store but just to look around because they don't celebrate halloween. But then their son Franky saw a cool costume and asked his parents to buy it for him but they said no. So Franky started crying on the floor and his parents got so embarrassed and said fine we'll give halloween a shot and Franky smiled and then went home. When they got home it was 7:50pm so they had chicken and rice for dinner and after they all went to bed including Franky. Franky woke up, put on his costume and went trick or treating at 2:00am when he was only 7 years old. He knocked on 8 different doors and got cool delicious candies. It was getting really late and he was getting tired so Franky was walking home until a kidnapper came out of his van saying he had free candy and Franky wanted more candy and went inside the van and fell for his little plan. So when the kidnapper and Franky got to a haunted theater Franky got really scared and wanted to go home and see his parents and he started crying because Franky just wanted to go home. And Franky woke up and realized it was all a dream and went back to sleep happily.

The End.
